

MIT Technology Review

Volume 125 Jul/Aug 2022 USD $12.00
Number 4 CAD $14.00

Sensory urbanism ^{F-31}
Sexy retrofits
Animal infrastructure
Plus
35 Innovators Under 35

Death to the smart city

“What is the city
but the people?”

—WILLIAM
SHAKESPEARE

Front

THE DOWNLOAD

- 9 Server farms in the city; seeking justice online; a genetically edited pig heart is transplanted; revelatory gender filters; what one tree can't do; clocks to predict how long you'll live; bike parking as public policy; plastic batteries for the grid.

OPINION

- 18 There are many ways for cities to be “smart”
It's time to explore how our cities can be true platforms for inclusive development.
- 20 Plugs across America
EVs appear poised to drive into the mainstream—but where will they plug in?
- Q&A
- 22 Yeah, it's all your fault
The author of Weapons of Math Destruction details how society has “weaponized” the idea of shame.

Death to the smart city

- 28 Marseille vs. the surveillance state
Cameras for policing cities are on the rise across France. Not everyone is welcoming them.
BY FLEUR MACDONALD
- 38 The future of urban housing is more efficient refrigerators
Adapting old, energy-inefficient buildings is less sexy but far greener than many high-tech solutions.
BY PATRICK SISSON
- 44 The next New Utopia
A new vision for Toronto aims to get right what Sidewalk Labs got so wrong. BY KARRIE JACOBS
- 50 Why didn't the toad cross the road?
Wildlife crossings—the best-studied form of animal infrastructure—aim to reverse the damage done by roads. Do they? BY MATTHEW PONSFORD
- 58 The battle for India's street corner
Local shops are a mainstay of city life in India. Tech firms are coming for them. BY EDD GENT

Back

- 66 Utopia unresolved
Smart city technology was meant to connect, protect, and enhance the lives of citizens. What happened?
By Chris Salter
- 72 What does your city smell like?
Sounds and smells are as vital to cities as the sights.
By Jennifer Hattam
- 75 35 Innovators Under 35
Our list of 35 rising young innovators is not just about what a group of talented people have accomplished—it's about the future direction of technology.

THE BACK PAGE

- 88 Cities. Still in crisis.
Reading about the challenges our cities faced half a century ago feels frustratingly familiar.

Cover
illustration by
Beto Fame