The Transforming Face of India's Agriculture Role of Digital Tools in Farming

Jagdeep Saxena

"One important aspect of changing India is digital agriculture. This is our future and the talented youth of India can make a great contribution in this regard. There have been relentless efforts to empower the farmers of India with digital technology. There is the increasing use of technology and artificial intelligence in crop assessment, digitisation of land records, spraying of insecticides and nutrients through drones."

Prime Minister Shri. Narendra Modi

Digital agriculture essentially promotes the use of information and communication technologies (ICT) and data systems to develop and deliver targeted information and services to make farming more profitable and sustainable. New and emerging technologies such as Internet of Things (IoT), drones, remote sensing, block chain, artificial intelligence etc. are poised to transform traditional agriculture into a data-driven precision farming system. More than 40 critical farming and allied activities have been identified in which application of digital technologies may significantly enhance efficiencies. At the pre-harvest stage, digital applications have been found very effective in crop and input selection based on soil health records and weather forecasts. During the crop growth stage, pest and disease monitoring management, irrigation scheduling and timely weather advisories are key areas in which digital technologies have proven their efficacy. At the post-harvest stage, digital platforms help farmers by real-time data transmission on domestic and overseas markets. Producers also get region specific facilitation on processing, value addition and transportation. Digital applications also provide guidance and facilitation for securing best credit and crop insurance facilities and also help farmers in availing benefits of various Government schemes. Adoption of digital technologies modernise production practices and leads to reduced risk of crop failure, increased and sustainable yields, and stable annual returns. In addition to farming community, digitisation of agriculture opens up new opportunities for

Become an Agronomist Help Farmers Meet Future Challenges

Ranjana Singh

If we look at global trends, the range of products derived from agriculture is now staggering. From exotic fruits and vegetables, plants that aide the pharmaceutical and cosmetic industry, crops that yield biofuels, to vegan meat and vegan leather, consumers have more varied demand than ever. Additionally, with the increasing emphasis on food security, poverty alleviation efforts, and climate change mitigation, sustainable agronomic practices to increase crop productivity has become an inalienable part of development goals. Therefore, as the agriculture sector works to feed the ever growing population, meet the demands for new and different products while averting the perils of over-exploitation of resources, agronomists are in demand more than ever before.

Who is an Agronomist?

'Agronomy' has been derived from the Greek derivatives

'Agros' and 'nomos' which respectively mean 'field' and 'management'. Therefore, Agronomy is basically the science and technology behind maintaining conditions in the field that are conducive for a great harvest of crop. Agronomy considers the whole range of influences on crop production, including climate and adaptation, soil, water and water availability, crop genetics, the properties of the soil and how the soil interacts with the growing crop; what nutrients the crop needs; the ways that crops grow and develop; and how best to control weeds, insects, fungi, and other crop pests. Non-biological considerations such as economic requirements and consumer and farmer behavior also inform agronomic practices, as do environmental constraints.

An agronomist develops efficient farming and crop growth practices that allow farmers to maximise their crop production. An agronomist may specialise in different areas such as soil science, plant genetics, sustainable development and research. While their day-to-day tasks may vary, most soil and crop scientists have the following responsibilities:

- Conducting R&D (research and development) of methods to improve the production of different variety of crops
- Interacting with local farmers to discuss different cropping practices and farm improvements.

India's Action Plan to Promote Millets Export

Sandip Das

As the United Nations has declared 2023 as the International Year of Millets, India being the largest producer of nutri-cereals, has initiated steps to boost exports. India accounts for an estimated share of around 41 percent of global millets production. According to the Food and Agriculture Organisation, global production of millets in the year 2020 was 30.464 million metric tonnes (MMT) and India's share was 12.49 MMT, which accounts to 41% of the total millet production. India's millet production in the 2021-22 crop year (July-June) was 15.9 MMT. Rajasthan, Maharashtra, Karnataka, Gujarat and Madhya Pradesh collectively have a share of more than 60% in the total millet production. Nearly 1% of the total millets produced in the country are exported.

Millets have superior nutritional values in comparison to highly consumed cereals such as rice and wheat. Millets are rich in calcium, iron, and fibers that help in fortifying essential nutrients for healthy growth in children. Also, the usage of millets in infant food and nutrition products is increasing. There are 16 major varieties of millet, which are produced and exported in the country. These include Sorghum (Jowar), Pearl Millet (Bajra), Finger Millet (Ragi) Minor Millets (Kangani), Proso Millet (Cheena), Kodo Millet (Kodo), Barnyard Millet (Sawa/Sarwa/Jhangora), Little Millet (Kulki), Pseudo Millets (Buckwheat/Kuttu), Amaranthus (Chaulai) and Browtop Millet.

Given the importance of millets in building nutritional security in the country, the government had initiated a series of efforts including gazetting millets as Nutri-Cereals and the declaration of the National Year of Millets in 2018.

Enhancing Production

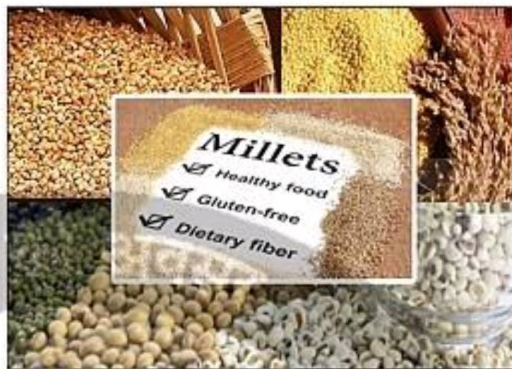

Currently, the Department of Agriculture and Farmers Welfare is implementing a Sub-Mission on Nutri-Cereals (millets) under National Food Security Mission to enhance area, production & productivity of millets including bajra. Under this Sub-Mission, bajra is being promoted in 89 districts of 9 states including 14 districts of Gujarat North Eastern States, Himachal Pradesh and Union Territories of Jammu & Kashmir and Ladakh have been given flexibility to include their districts under the programme. Furthermore, the Government has revised the guidelines for movement of the surplus millets from one state to another. The provision of inter-state transportation of surplus millets through Food Corporation of India is incorporated to cater for advance demand placed by consuming states before the start of procurement.

Leveraging Global Forums

The Union Minister for Agriculture and Farmers Welfare, Shri. Narendra Singh Tomar recently stated that along with wheat and rice, millets should also find a respectable place again in the food plate. Shri. Tomar said with the aim of promoting nutri-cereals in the country and the world, India will play a major role in celebrating the International Year of Millets-2023, announced by the United Nations. The proposal was made at the UN by Prime Minister Shri. Narendra Modi and 72 countries supported it.

While addressing the recently held 'Millets-Smart Nutritive Food' conclave organised by Agricultural and Processed Food Products Development Authority (APEDA) with the support of the Ministry of Commerce & Industry and the Ministry of Agriculture & Farmers Welfare recently, Union Minister for Commerce and Industry Shri. Piyush Goyal said, "The world has accepted several such initiatives championed by India from Yoga to Millets, a clear reflection of the Prime Minister Narendra Modi's global leadership and the success of his bid to promote the India-story across the world." The Minister said that we must work together to mainstream the millet story and make millets globally acceptable to solve problems of malnutrition and starvation that many parts of the world continue to face.

At the 'Millets-Smart Nutritive Food' conclave, at least 50 Mission heads from different countries, 35 importers from 18 countries, participated in person. Besides, 75 Indian Embassy representatives joined the conclave virtually. The event also witnessed a huge participation of representatives from different countries as well as important stakeholders such as exporters, importers, FPOs, Start-ups, farmers, etc.

As part of a robust strategy to promote millets, the Indian government has been making efforts to rope in Indian missions abroad in branding and publicity of Indian millets, identification of international chefs as well as potential buyers such as departmental stores, supermarkets and hypermarkets for organising B2B (business to business) meetings and direct tie-ups. In addition, Ambassadors of Foreign missions in India of the targeted countries and potential importers would also be invited to showcase various millet-based products, including Ready-to-Eat millet products and facilitate B2B meetings.

APEDA plans to organise millet-promotional activities in South Africa, Dubai, Japan, South Korea, Indonesia, Saudi Arabia, Sydney, Belgium, Germany, United Kingdom and United States of America by facilitating participation of different stakeholders from India in some of the significant food shows, Buyer Seller Meets and Road Shows. APEDA also plans to showcase millets and its value added product at various global platforms such as Gulfood 2023, Foodex, Seoul Food & Hotel Show, Saudi Agro Food, Fine Food Show in Sydney (Australia), Belgium's Food & Beverages Show, Germany's BioFach and Anuga Food Fair, San Francisco's Winter Fancy Food Show, etc.

Following the successful conduct of 'Millets-Smart Nutritive Food' conclave, APEDA with the support of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, plans to organise millet promotion events in 16 other countries to provide a global platform for Indian Millets, which are rich in nutrient value and unique in taste. APEDA would also organise food sampling and tasting at the retail level and in key local bazaars of targeted countries where individual, household consumers can gain familiarity with millet products.

As per the Directorate General of Commercial Intelligence data, India registered a growth of 8.02% in the export of millets in the financial year 2021-22 as the export of millets was 159,332.16 metric tonne against 147,501.08 metric tonne during the same period last year. As per estimates, from an export of $ 64 million in 2021-22, shipment of nutri-cereals could cross $ 100 million by 2023-24. India's major millet exporting countries are the United Arab Emirates, Nepal, Saudi Arabia, Libya, Oman, Egypt, Tunisia, Yemen, U.K and U.S.A. The varieties of millets exported by India include Bajra, Ragi, Canary, Jowar, and Buckwheat. The major millet importing countries in the world are Indonesia, Belgium, Japan, Germany, Mexico, Italy, the U.S.A, United Kingdom, Brazil and Netherlands.

The Centre has created the Nutri Cereals Export Promotion Forum to give impetus to the export of potential products, including millets, and to remove the bottlenecks in the supply chain of Nutri cereals. Recently a knowledge report titled "Super food Millets: A USD 2 Billion Export Opportunity for India," was released. This is a first-of-its-kind endeavor to capture the global and Indian scenario of millets in order to assess India's potential for exporting millets and millet-based value-added products around the world. It is estimated that the millets market is set to grow from its current market value of more than USD 3 billion to over USD 12 billion by 2025. By boosting millet exports, the Government of India aims to increase farmers' incomes while promoting sustainable farming in the country.

Become an Agronomist - Help Farmers Meet Future ...

- Monitoring plant growth and plant health.
- Soil testing to determine a crop's nutrient requirement.
- Identifying methods to protect plants from stressors.
- Developing environment-friendly ideas and farm practices.
- Assisting in seeds testing, sourcing and selection.
- Examining crops for signs of diseases.
- Maintaining records of key findings and collecting samples to improve next-generation crops.
- Comparing research results with already published studies to find viable solutions to problems.
- Sensitising farmers and related groups on crop research information.

Where do we Find Agronomists?

Agronomists often specialise in areas such as irrigation/water science, soil fertility, plant breeding, plant physiology, crop management, economics, and pest control, but have the capability of addressing and integrating all of the multiple areas impacting crop production. Therefore, we can find agronomists in the laboratories of agricultural research institutes, educational institutions, private companies, in the farms, as educators and as advisers to governmental and non-governmental organisations working in the domain of agriculture and allied activities. Agronomists in private industry usually work for companies that sell agricultural products or services, such as seed companies, agro-chemical companies, and fertiliser companies. They may also work for consulting firms that advise farmers on how to use these products. Agronomists in government work for local, state, or federal agencies. They may help develop and implement policies to protect the environment or to ensure the safety of food products. Agronomists in educational institutions conduct research or teach courses in agronomy, crop science, and soil science.

Agronomists also play crucial roles as advisers and policy makers dealing with critical issues of global concern, including food and water security, air quality and climate change, soil and water conservation, rural communities and economic growth, health and nutrition, wildlife conservation and many other areas of public concern.

How to Become an Agronomist?

Agronomists typically need a bachelor's degree for entry-level positions. However, some research positions may require a master's degree. Agronomists who wish to teach at the college level must have a doctorate. The following are the basic steps one needs to take in order to pursue a career in Agronomy.

- Complete 10+2 with Science and Mathematics
- Pursue an undergraduate degree in agriculture or a related field: One of the most common degrees is Bachelor of Science in Agriculture, which is a three-year undergraduate programme. Admission to these courses usually happens through an entrance examination. Many colleges conduct their own unique admission tests while others have to follow the Common University Entrance Test (CUET) route.
- Complete your master's degree: A Master of Science degree can be beneficial for agronomists who want to enter the field of research. To get admission in an M.Sc. degree course, you typically need a bachelor's degree in agriculture, agronomy or a related subject.

- Internship: By undergoing an internship, one can gain experience and learn about the job roles and responsibilities in an organisational set up. There are various companies, educational institutions and government agencies that hire graduates as interns. Most internship positions will involve working with a senior agronomist or working as a research assistant in a lab.
- Get certified: If you do not have a degree in agriculture or a related field but still want to become an agronomist, the best route for you is to join the India CCA (Certified Crop Advisor) programme. The CCA programme is a training, evaluation and certification programme for agriculture professionals with the objective of strengthening the agricultural extension system of the country. The India CCA programme under the umbrella of the International Certified Crop Adviser (ICCA) programme has been developed by the collaboration of American Society of Agronomy (ASA) and International Rice Research Institute (IRRI) under Cereal System Initiative for South Asia (CSISA) - a project funded by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, United States Agency for International Development and the World Bank. The local administrator of the program is the Indian Society of Agribusiness Professionals (ISAP) who works in collaboration with the India CCA Board and CCA program manager.
- Search and apply for jobs: After gaining the requisite qualifications, experience and certification, you can create a CV detailing your key skills related to agronomy. Look for job openings and file your applications.

Skills-set Required to Become an Agronomist

- Understanding of agricultural economics: Understanding the economics of scale of the agriculture sector and the farmer's expected cost and revenue can be essential for crop scientists. It can be key to know how farmers manage their enterprise, marketing and production risks to affect their bottom line. Employers sometimes prefer candidates with mastery of agricultural economics, as it helps in finding the most viable solution to an agricultural problem.
- Analytical and mathematical skills: Being able to gather and analyse data related to agriculture is an important skill for an agronomist. Having a background in maths or statistics is valuable, as you may have to calculate input rates, field area, equipment calibration and set valid field comparisons. When hiring a crop scientist, employers often prefer candidates who can integrate collected data and derive meaningful insights from it. Data analytics is becoming an increasingly important part of agriculture as farmers become more interested in using data to make decisions about what crops to plant, where to plant them, and how to manage them once they are planted. Agronomists who are able to use data analytics to make better decisions about farming will be in high demand, as farmers will want to hire professionals who can help them get the most out of their crops.
- Technical skills: Technical skills are the ability to understand and operate complex equipment, software and machinery. An agronomist invariably needs to have an understanding of the various technical and technological interventions and systems used in an agricultural farm, laboratory or agri-business set up.

- Communication skills: Effective communication skills can help agronomists convey their ideas clearly and concisely as they need to frequently interact with farmers, scientists and other stakeholders in the agriculture sector. They also use communication skills to explain scientific concepts to the public and the media.
- Problem-solving skills: Agronomists use their problem-solving skills to find solutions to issues that affect crop production. They may use their problem-solving skills to find ways to increase crop yields, reduce the need for pesticides or find ways to improve soil quality.
- Teamwork and Leadership skills: Agronomists often work in teams with other professionals, such as soil scientists, plant pathologists and engineers. Leadership skills can help them manage and motivate a team to complete a project or task. Leadership skills can also help them in mentoring and training new agronomists.

Work Environment and Challenges

Agronomists work in a variety of settings, including farms, greenhouses, nurseries, educational institutions, and research laboratories. They may also work in offices, where they spend time writing reports, analysing data, and preparing proposals. Some agronomists travel to other countries to study foreign agricultural systems and to consult with other agronomists. The work can be physically demanding, and agronomists may be exposed to hazardous materials, such as pesticides and herbicides. They may also be exposed to extreme weather conditions, such as heat, cold, and dust.

(The list is purely indicative)

Over the past 60 years, India has changed from a traditional, subsistence oriented agriculture to one based on science and technology. The journey of India's agriculture sector had certain key phases that started with the creation of the Indian Council of Agricultural Research (ICAR), followed by coordinated agronomic trials, fertiliser experiments and soil conservation research. The establishment of State Agricultural Universities and the introduction of coordinated research programmes on high-yielding varieties (HYVs) further strengthened agronomic research and interventions. Further, the Central Research Institute for Dryland Agriculture (CRIDA), was established, leading to the development of a national system of Farming Systems Research (FSR). In 1972, ICRISAT (International Crops Research Institute for the Semi-Arid Tropics) - an international organisation which conducts agricultural research for rural development, was established with its headquarters in India's Patancheru. One of the mandates of ICRISAT was to develop the concept of integrating the management technologies for various components of climate, soil, water and crops with a farmers' perspective. Following this, mechanisms for strengthening on-farm research were emphasised so as to provide stronger linkages between researchers, extension workers and farmers. In all these developments, agronomists had crucial roles to play. In present times, while India has made steady progress in bridging the gap between the problems and solutions of its agriculture sector, the country's focus is now shifting towards prioritising more sustainable ways of farming. Hence, pursuing a career in agronomy is not only a great way to contribute towards the modernisation and growth of the agriculture sector but also to enter the ever-growing market of green jobs and play an active role in tackling climate change.

The Transforming Face of India's Agriculture ...

farmers sow, fertilise and harvest the crop in the next decade. IoT device and solution providers are focusing on low-cost sustainable solutions to reduce the cost of farming. In the IoT policy of Government of India agriculture sector has been outlined and its potential uses in smart agriculture have been enumerated.

Applications and Advances

National Agriculture Market in e-mode (eNAM): In a bid to eliminate middlemen and provide best prices to farmers for their produce, Government of India in 2016 launched eNAM. It's a pan-India electronic trading portal that networks existing APMC (Agricultural Produce Marketing Committee) mandis and thus facilitates the farmers to sell their produce without barriers and at best prices. It's a digital platform that enables farmers to sell their produce through online competitive and transparent price discovery system and online payment facility. Since the launch of eNAM portal, 1260 mandis from 22 states and three UTs have been integrated on the platform and 1000 more mandis will be integrated soon. It's a hugely popular platform with 1.76 crore farmers and traders on board (July, 2022). In addition, around 2200 FPOs (Farmer Producer Organisations) have also been registered for commercial trading benefitting a huge number of farmers. Currently, over 200 commodities are being traded across the country. Based on digital innovations, a Platform of Platforms (PoP) has been launched to integrate the various platforms of service providers operational in the agriculture value chain. eNAM is now a multi-lingual (12 languages) trade portal and a robust mobile app, is also available free of cost for all stakeholders, through which stakeholders can track progress of respective lots online. To promote eNAM further, the Government provides financial assistance upto Rs. 75 lakh per mandi for development of related hardware and infrastructure including various equipments needed for electronic trading.

Startups: Agritech startups/companies are foraying into digital technologies providing services in blockchains, weather and crop advisories, marketing, finance, input supply, processing and value chain. Most of the agri-tech startups are providing services mainly in marketplace segment with quality assurance.

In most of the cases, they supply fresh and organic fruits/vegetables to consumers procured directly from farmers. Some startups supply organic milk and dairy products on daily basis through specific mobile apps. But recently many startups have started providing innovation and sustainable solutions for smart and more profitable agriculture. Startups are now providing solutions such as biogas plants, solar powered cold storage, fencing and water pumping, weather forecast, spraying machines, etc. These startups are acting as a missing link between the farmers, input dealers, wholesalers, retailers and consumers connecting each other and providing strong market linkages and quality produce on time. To promote agritech startups using digital technologies, Government is implementing a programme called Innovation and Agri-entrepreneurship Development in which selected agri-tech startups are provided financial and technical support with mentoring/hand-holding services. Government has recently launched a Rs. 500 crore accelerator programme for taking forward and popularizing the successful initiatives of agri-startups.

Digital technologies are creating immense opportunities for employment and self-employment in rural areas, particularly for youths. From production to inspection, storage, transportation, and finally marketing and consumption, digital technologies are generating livelihood opportunities for diverse group of professionals at different tiers. Besides, benefits of digital agriculture include food security, better quality of soil, air and water, better economic returns; and ultimately a better quality of life for farmers and other partners. Agriculture certainly stands to gain with digital disruption. No wonder, this sector is attracting large conglomerates, leading IT companies, investors and young innovators and entrepreneurs. Digitisation of agriculture promises high and inclusive growth in a sustainable manner. To conclude, digitisation is poised to change the scene of Indian agriculture in future and guarantee higher income to farmers and reduce distress.

Namami Gange Recognized by UN as Torchbearer in World Ecology Restoration Efforts

The United Nations (UN) has recognised 'Namami Gange' initiative as one of the top 10 World Restoration Flagships to revive the natural world. Namami Gange was selected from over 150 such initiatives from 70 countries across the globe. The United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) describes Namami Gange as, "Launched in 2014, the government-led Namami Gange initiative is rejuvenating, protecting and conserving the Ganges and its tributaries, reforesting parts of the Ganges basin and promoting sustainable farming. It also aims to revive key wildlife species, including river dolphins, softshell turtles, otters, and the hilsa shad fish. Investment by the Indian government is up to $4.25 billion so far. The initiative has the involvement of 230 organisations, with 1,500km of river restored to date. Additionally, there has been 30,000 hectares of afforestation, so far, with a 2030 goal of 134,000 hectares."

How will Namami Gange Benefit from this Recognition?

The initiatives declared World Restoration Flagships are eligible to receive UN-backed promotion, advice or funding.

What is Namami Gange project?

The Government launched an integrated Ganga conservation mission called 'Namami Gange' in 2014 to arrest the pollution of the sacred River Ganga and subsequently revive the river. River Ganga is important not only for its cultural and spiritual significance but also because it hosts more than 40% of the country's population. The focus of Namami Gange programme has been on abatement of pollution, together with cleaning of ghats, regulatory control of industrial pollution and real time online monitoring of pollution in the river, besides afforestation and biodiversity conservation.

Nodal Agency: The National Mission for Clean Ganga (NMCG), is the designated authority to take all necessary decisions and actions for pollution abatement and rejuvenation of River Ganga. NMCG is the nodal agency acting as the planning, financing, monitoring and coordinating agency for implementing the 'Namami Gange' programme.

Budget and Implementation

Initially, Government of India launched the Namami Gange Programme in June 2014, with the total budgetary outlay of Rs 20,000 crore to accomplish the twin objectives of effective abatement of pollution, conservation and rejuvenation of National River Ganga and its tributaries. The budget for the programme is provided in the Demands for Grants for Ministry of Jal Shakti. The National Mission for Clean Ganga releases funds to State Project Management Groups (SPMGs) on the basis of Annual Action Plans as and when demanded. Under Namami Gange programme, diverse set of interventions for cleaning and rejuvenation of river Ganga have been taken up. These include pollution abatement activities including domestic sewage, industrial effluent, solid waste etc., River front Management, Aviral Dhara, Rural Sanitation, Afforestation, Biodiversity Conservation, Public Participation etc. A total of 346 projects are taken up at a sanctioned cost of Rs.30,235 crore, out of which, 158 projects are completed (as of July 2022).

The certainty of funds and scaled-up budget enabled the mission to survey and conduct condition assessment of all the cities, towns, villages and industries along River Ganga and develop a scientific roadmap for appropriate multi-sectoral interventions. In order to impart momentum and broaden the scope of the program for Ganga Rejuvenation, an empowered institutional framework was developed. The programme, with its holistic approach and innovative features, has gathered momentum with completion of several projects and developing a framework for river rejuvenation.

Key Ministries comprising of (a) Water Resources, River Development and Ganga Rejuvenation, (b) Environment, Forest & Climate Change, (c) Urban Development, (d) Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation, (e) Rural Development (f) Tourism, and (g) Shipping have been working together since the inception of the programme for a comprehensive approach.

Recognising the multi-sectoral, multi-dimensional and multi-stakeholder nature of the Ganga rejuvenation challenge, efforts have been made to improve the inter-ministerial, and centre-state coordination with increased involvement in preparation of action plan and increased monitoring at central and state levels. The implementation of the program has been divided into entry-level activities (for immediate visible impact), medium term activities (to be implemented within 5 years of time frame), and long-term activities (to be implemented within 10 years).

Entry-level activities includes river surface cleaning to address the floating solid wastes; rural sanitation to arrest the pollution (solid and liquid) entering through rural sewage drains and construction of toilets; renovation, modernization, and construction of crematoria that prevents the disposal of un-burnt/ partially burnt bodies in the river; Riverfront Management for Ghats' development in selected cities and towns repair, modernisation and construction of ghats to improvise the human-river connect. Rehabilitation and upgradation of existing sewage treatment plants (STPs) along River Ganga; conservation of Aquatic life - special attention on Dolphin, Turtles and Ghariyals; safe disposal of flowers and other puja material; establishment of Ganga Task Force and Ganga Vahini; GIS data and Spatial Analysis for Ganga basin; study of communities depending on Ganga for their traditional livelihood; National Ganga Monitoring Centre; special guidelines for sand mining in Ganga; assessment of Special Properties of Ganga Water; and communication and public outreach activities are also included in short-term activities.

On medium term, apart from the completion of the ongoing projects, activities, include identification of urban habitations on banks of river Ganga for extending coverage of sewerage infrastructure including sewage treatment; making over 1,600 Gram Panchayats located on Ganga banks free from open defecation; and enforcing zero liquid discharge by the grossly polluting industries located in the all Ganga River Basin States.

The long-term vision for rejuvenation of River Ganga is restoring wholesomeness of the river in terms of defining the concept of ensuring Nirmal Dhara, Aviral Dhara and maintaining the ecological and geological integrity of the river.

Strategic Steps and Actions

Strategic steps and actions for revival and long-term security of River Ganga are grouped under different missions:

• Mission 1: Aviral Dhara

For water resources planning with emphasis on wetlands, forests and distributed groundwater and surface water storages; to ensure efficient use of water; shifting policy with emphasis on water resource preservation, ensuring longitudinal river connectivity etc.

• Mission 2: Nirmal Dhara

For the management of solid and liquid wastes generated from domestic/commercial sources; riverfront development, floodplain management and rejuvenation of water bodies; management of industry-generated solid and liquid wastes and management of polluted agricultural run-off.

• Mission 3: Ecological Restoration

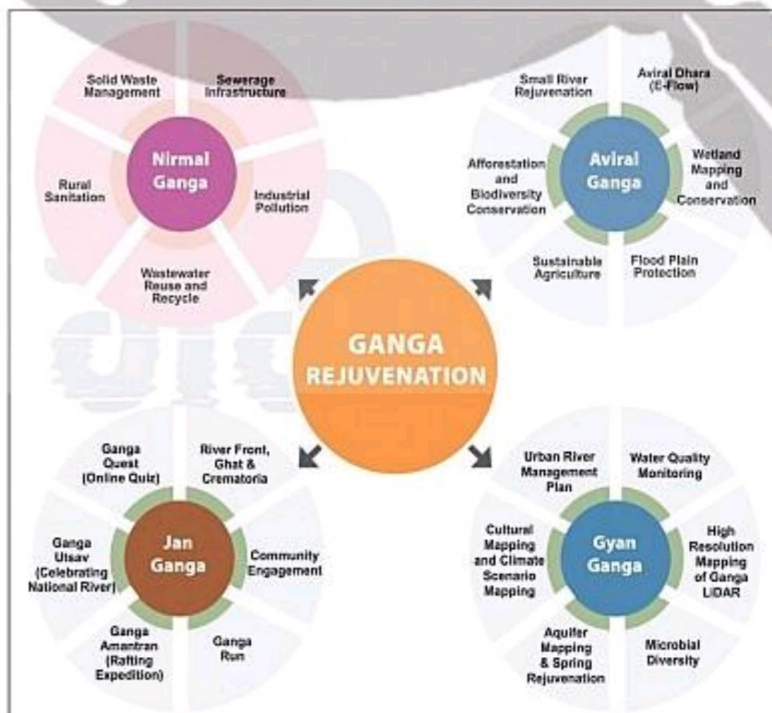

For the restoration of unpolluted rivers; regulation of river bed farming and sand-mining from river beds; control of alien species invasions, overfishing and fishing during spawning seasons; river nutrient assessment and release of sediments trapped behind dams/barrages into downstream river reaches; long-term biomonitoring of the Ganga river network; synergising actions with the dolphin conservation action plan-2010; and comprehensive research on ecological dynamics of the river system.

• Mission 4: Sustainable Agriculture

To promote the adoption of conservation agriculture to enhance soil fertility and agricultural output with resource conservation; promotion of organic farming; promoting regional resource conservation steps to counter monotonous agro-ecosystem impacts and experimentation, adaptability and flexibility in agriculture to synthesise traditional knowledge with ongoing and future scientific discoveries.

• Mission 5: Geological Safeguarding

To control/regulate geologically hazardous activities including deep groundwater withdrawals and underground excavations; restrictions on geomorphologically harmful land-use practices such as deforestation and construction activities on hill slopes; improved drainage of low-lying areas and disturbed areas stabilisation; and

ISSUE DATED 10 - 16 December 2022

Question: In his recent 'Mann ki Baat' address, the Prime Minister mentioned that in the last 8 years the export of musical instruments from India has increased three and a half times. Let us know which musical instrument is native to your region and what cultural significance do they hold?

D.S.D. PRAVALLIKA
ANDHRA PRADESH

Bobbili Veena is native to Andhra Pradesh. It is manufactured using a single piece of jackfruit wood (hence the other name 'ekanda Veena') in Gollapalli, a town in Bobbili, Vijayanagar district and is famous for its exquisite design, fine tune and distinctive notes. Due to its uniqueness, the instrument has earned a Geographical Indication (GI) tag.

History books suggest that the Bobbili ruler Peddarayadu (17th century) used to play the Veena dearly and hence set up Veena-making workshops for the craft, apart from providing training to the musicians. This led to the mass production and subsequent local popularity of the renowned 'Bobbili Veena'.

The Veena is considered to be culturally significant as:

1. Veena is associated with Saraswati, the Hindu Goddess of knowledge and wisdom.
2. It produces a meditative sound, which takes the listeners onto a meditative state.

3. Veena has an important role in the Carnatic classical music.

4. Veena has evolved over the centuries since its first mention in Bharatamuni's Natyashastra to come to its present form.

5. Many other string instruments like Sitar are believed to have drawn inspiration from the Veena.

6. The technique of making the Veena is passed on from generation to generation without the process being formally documented. Moreover, the miniature versions of the Veena are popular decorative items in households. They are exchanged and cherished as gifts and as token of remembrance representing our Incredible India. Bobbili Veena has high demand both in domestic as well as in foreign countries. This has added to the increased exports thus leading to the welfare of the artisans and contributing to our Gross Domestic Product (GDP).

To ensure that ecosystems should be strengthened against catastrophic disasters by preserving wetlands, promoting mixed vegetation and indigenous forests, and curbing human land use disturbances and encroachments; floodplain regulations; to study the ecology of forest fires and epidemics; to check deforestation, road and building constructions, unsafe debris disposal in the upper Ganga basin and other hilly regions to minimise land-slides, among others.

● Mission 7: River Hazards Management

To ensure preparation of basin scale flood-risk maps; for drainage improvement; to look for alternatives to embankments for flood management with emphasis on 'living with the floods' concept; research on sediment dynamics and its application in river management projects for sustainable river management strategies, etc.

● Mission 8: Environmental Knowledge

For processing and storage of information on the basin's natural resources, anthropogenic activities, and environmental monitoring of the basin; conducting educational workshops and campaigns with stakeholders and interested citizens to enable their sensitisation and comprehensive understanding of basin processes; conducting ground level monitoring and field researches of the Ganga river basin's environment with stakeholder participation.

One of NMCG's long term visions for Ganga Rejuvenation is to restore the viable populations of all endemic and endangered biodiversity of the river so that they occupy their full historical range and fulfill their role in maintaining the integrity of the Ganga River ecosystems.

Presence of rich biodiversity in a river ecosystem is the ultimate indicator of the river's health. The Ganga river ecosystem supports more than 25,000 oral and faunal species. Biodiversity of any ecosystem is threatened foremost by the loss or degradation of its habitat. Major threats to River Ganga's biodiversity can be grouped under five overlapping categories: over-exploitation, water pollution, flow modification, destruction or degradation of habitat and invasion by exotic species, with global scale environmental changes being superimposed upon all of them.

Mascot

NMCG has been focusing on youth as part of its outreach and public communications efforts as they are the impellers of change. As a step towards this NMCG tied-up with Diamond Toons to develop and distribute comics, e-comics and animated videos. The content will be designed with the objective of bringing about behavioural change amongst children towards Ganga and other rivers. To increase association among children, Chacha Chaudhary was declared as the mascot of the Namami Gange Programme and will be useful in ground-level activation for Ganga rejuvenation.

United Nations Decade on Ecosystem Restoration

The UN Decade on Ecosystem Restoration aims to prevent, halt and reverse the degradation of ecosystems on every continent and in every ocean. Ecosystems support all life on Earth. The healthier our ecosystems are, the healthier the planet - and its people would be. It can help to end poverty, combat climate change and prevent a mass extinction. The recognized initiatives, such as Namami Gange, were declared World Restoration Flagships and are eligible to receive UN-backed promotion, advice, technical expertise or funding.

Together, the 10 flagships aim to restore more than 68 million hectares and create nearly 15 million jobs. Namami Gange was selected as one of the flagships that are the "best examples of large-scale and long-term ecosystem restoration, embodying the 10 Restoration Principles of the UN Decade on Ecosystem Restoration".

About UNEP World Restoration Flagships

The United Nations has recognized 10 ground-breaking efforts from around the globe for their role in restoring the natural world. The winning initiatives were unveiled at the UN Biodiversity Conference (COP15) in Montreal and a special virtual gala event.

- Efforts from Central America to East Asia were honoured
