

91

MIT Technology Review

Vol. 129 No. 3 • May/June 2026

AstroTurf wars
Killer microbes from the mirror world
PLUS!
New fiction from
Jeff VanderMeer

Clone Wolf

Colossal Biosciences said it cloned endangered red wolves.
But what has it actually made?

04/6/2026
SB

Display until June 30, 2026

Front

- 2 The Debrief
Letter from the editor

THE DOWNLOAD

- 6 Tunneling under Los Angeles; a report card for our relationship with nature; one simple, safe way to spook bears; a $400,000 wild goose chase; and more.

PROFILE

- 14 Choice signals
Does free will exist? Neuroscientist Uri Maoz devises experiments to reveal how—or whether—the brain makes decisions. By Sarah Scoles

COLUMNS

- 19 The Algorithm
The missing step between hype and profit.
By Will Douglas Heaven
- 20 The Spark
It's time to make a plan for nuclear waste.
By Casey Crownhart
- 21 The Checkup
What's in a name? Moderna's "vaccine" vs. "therapy" dilemma.
By Antonio Regalado

Nature

- 22 Chasing ghosts
Last year, Colossal Biosciences announced it had cloned red wolves. But had it? The answer raises questions about conservation's future.

BY BOYCE UPHOLT

- 32 The problem with thinking you're part Neanderthal
The idea that modern humans inherited DNA from Neanderthals is one of the 21st century's most celebrated discoveries in evolution.

BY BEN CRAIR

- 38 Turf wars
Around the country, heated debates are taking place over whether to install fake grass, pitting neighbors against each other.

BY DOUGLAS MAIN

- 46 Unsilent spring
The noise of human cities is getting so bad it's hurting animals. Can we learn to shut up?

BY CLIVE THOMPSON

- 52 Blue Arctic
To understand what the future holds for Earth's northernmost waters, scientists are digging deep below the seabed.

PHOTO ESSAY BY TIM KALVELAGE

Back

- 60 Biotechnology:
Through the looking glass
Synthetic biologists were tantalized by the idea of making the mirror images of microbes. Things got complicated. By Stephen Ornes

- 68 Book review: Tool use
A builder of the modern culture of tech asks: How do we fix everything? And why? But he doesn't quite answer. By Lee Vinsel

- 74 Field notes: How robots learn
The latest boom in robotics represents a revolution in the way machines have learned to interact with the world. By James O'Donnell

- 80 Fiction: Constellations
By Jeff VanderMeer

- 88 The AI Hype Index
Our highly subjective take on the latest buzz in artificial intelligence.

A lot of the time the real trick is not to withdraw from "nature" but to get better at being part of it. —p. 8